

Regarding the phone privacy act I would like to comment. I have never had a problem finding someone to do whatever job I needed to hire nor a problem with whom to vote for. As a tax paying citizen I find no reason why anyone should have to be bothered with unwanted calls. I get angry when I am awakened,bathing,or having dinner only to answer the phone to someone whom I do not wish to speak to. If these people want to solicit their goods then perhaps via mail ONLY would be the way to deal with this. Sure would keep postal workers in a job. Now we get unwanted email which is the same in my view. If I want something I should be able to plainly ask for it instead of having things shoved down my throat. The economy is in enough trouble without having to pay for products to keep these people from intruding into the privacy of your own home. We deserve to have some kind of privacy in this matter.
